Japanese garage rockers, Electric Eel Shock released their debut album some eight years ago, and have toured in over 21 countries since. Albums include Maybe I think, we can beat Nirvana, Slayers Bay Blues, Go America and Go Europe!, with their new album, Beat Me, set for release this coming April. Songs like the lauded "Rock & Roll Can Rescue the World," have led fans to dub them "the new Metallica" at Roskilde Festival 2003.

Hailing from Oxford, England, living in Los Angeles, The Thieves fuse the best of British music with the exploits of their self-imposed exile. The trio play rock music with a sly nod at the past but more than a serious wink to the future. The LA Times describes the band as "hard hitting drums, power chords and fast paced basslines, but ultimately their songcraft and presentation distinguish the group as modern and original."
